Key Questions and Debates

- How could Starlink enter the U.S. wireless market?
- How much of a threat is Starlink Mobile to U.S. wireless?
- Can Starlink take meaningful share from cable in U.S. broadband?
- With demand for spectrum assets growing among D2D players, who are the potential sellers?
- How do we expect Comcast's separation into two companies to play out?

How could Starlink enter the U.S. wireless market?

- Scenario 1 (our base case): Build a standalone terrestrial network
  - Without an MVNO, SpaceX builds its own U.S. network.
  - Estimate SpaceX would need to build ~75k sites, with a build beginning in 2028.
  - Even with the pending acquisition of 65 MHz from EchoStar, Starlink Mobile would likely need to augment its holdings further, including low-band spectrum to support in-building penetration.
  - Model $111b of mobile capex through 2031, or 56% of Connectivity segment capex, underscoring the capital intensity and execution complexity of a broader U.S. rollout.

- Scenario 2: Secure a MVNO partnership
  - We view a near-term U.S. MVNO as unlikely and a long-term arrangement as a coin flip.
  - The Big-3 appear to see little benefit in granting Starlink access today, a view reinforced by their recently announced direct-to-device joint venture.

- Scenario 3: Potential acquisition of a wireless carrier
  - SpaceX could acquire a U.S. carrier, though we view this as unlikely given the substantial regulatory pushback it would likely face.
  - Still, from an industry-structure perspective, we would view an acquisition as a more favorable outcome than the emergence of a well-capitalized fourth player.

How much of a threat is Starlink Mobile to U.S. wireless?

- Our take:
  - We expect SpaceX to begin its U.S. terrestrial build in 2028 and launch a U.S. direct-to-consumer offering in 2029.
  - Our U.S. DTC forecast ramps to 2m subscribers in 2029, 4m in 2030, and 5m by year-end 2031.

- Ecosystem impact:
  - We see Starlink Mobile as more of a lingering overhang on U.S. wireless than a near-term fundamental threat, with limited expected pressure on the roughly $240b U.S. mobile service revenue ecosystem over our forecast horizon.
  - In 2030, our forecast represents just ~1% of total U.S. phone subscribers and $1.4b of service revenue, or only ~0.5% of industry service revenue.
  - The bigger near-term impact is likely sentiment rather than fundamentals: even if direct subscriber and revenue share remains modest, the prospect of a future terrestrial build, eventual MVNO, or broader SpaceX ecosystem strategy should keep disruption risk in the investor debate until the company's ultimate ambitions become clearer.

- Structural limitations and an unclear value proposition:
  - Direct-to-device connectivity cannot replicate the in-building penetration or capacity of terrestrial networks, handset compatibility remains limited, and Starlink Mobile's value proposition versus incumbents remains unclear.
  - We expect pricing on par with cable MVNOs rather than at a steep discount; those offers launched in 2017 and scaled to more than 21m subscribers with only minimal impact on incumbents' profit pools.
  - With U.S. "dysconnectivity" not severe enough to drive large-scale demand for a satellite-supplemented service, we view Starlink Mobile as a supplement to existing coverage rather than a competitive substitute.

Can Starlink take meaningful share from cable in U.S. broadband?

- Our take:
  - We expect Starlink Broadband to take meaningful share from cable in the U.S. residential broadband market as lower-cost capacity, cheaper user terminals, and pricing flexibility expand its addressable market beyond its core rural geographies.
  - From an estimated 2.52m U.S. subscribers exiting 2025, we forecast Starlink Broadband scaling to 12.19m by year-end 2030, including net adds of 1.34m in 2026 and 2.03m in 2027.

- Starship-enabled capacity and cheaper terminals drive more aggressive pricing:
  - The acceleration is driven by Starship-enabled V3 Broadband satellite launches, which we estimate will deliver roughly 24x the downlink capacity per launch relative to Falcon 9.
  - Smaller, lighter, and cheaper user terminals should further support adoption, while lower capacity costs should give Starlink room to price more aggressively as it competes more directly with cable; we model developed-market broadband ARPU declining at a 14% CAGR from 2025 through 2030, reflecting a deliberate shift toward volume.

- Expanding beyond rural into cable-dominant, non-fiber homes:
  - These levers position Starlink to penetrate the estimated 20% of U.S. homes, or roughly 30m, that we expect will not be passed by fiber over the long term — a predominantly cable-dominant segment — with our 2030 forecast implying 39% penetration of that cohort.
  - We see satellite's share of total U.S. residential broadband subscribers rising to 8% by year-end 2030 from 3% in 2025, with cable ceding the majority of Starlink's net adds and fixed wireless access (FWA) also losing some share; we expect cable's share to fall to 44% from 57% over the same period.

- Lowering cable residential broadband net adds in 2027 and beyond:
  - We recently raised our total cable residential broadband net loss estimate to 2.06m for 2027, including declines of 550k for both Comcast and Charter, with net losses worsening over the forecast period.

With demand for spectrum assets growing among D2D players, who are the potential sellers?

- Our take:
  - We believe MSS spectrum demand will remain robust as D2D operators (Starlink, Amazon LEO, and AST SpaceMobile) seek additional capacity and geographic coverage.
  - Recent transactions support this view (Amazon/Globalstar, SpaceX/EchoStar, ASTS/Ligado)
  - Rocket Lab's acquisition of Iridium broadens the buyer universe beyond pure-play D2D players.
  - We see Viasat and Anterix as the key spectrum monetization beneficiaries.

- Viasat (++):
  - We are most constructive on Viasat, whose global L-Band and S-Band spectrum portfolio we value at $16.1b ($0.28/MHz-pop).
  - Following the European Commission's decision to reshape how 2 GHz satellite spectrum is allocated across the EU, Viasat is well positioned to monetize a portion of its European holdings

- Anterix (+):
  - We are similarly bullish on Anterix, which still trades at roughly $0.56/MHz-pop versus our $0.75/MHz-pop value
  - Its 900 MHz multi-use spectrum covers 85% of U.S. counties, including many major metros, and its 11 contracts to date have priced at an average of ~$1.40/MHz-pop.

- Sirius XM (=):
  - Domestically, SiriusXM appears more likely to pursue partnership-led value creation than an outright sale of its 2 GHz spectrum.
  - CFO Zac Coughlin said he does not "envision a single monetization event but rather a phased approach, with timelines gated by technology development and partnership availability.”

How do we expect Comcast’s separation into two companies to play out?

- Our take:
  - We agree with Comcast's plan to separate into two publicly traded companies but are somewhat surprised by the timing, given management's prior commentary.
  - While management framed the spin-off around sharper strategic focus, capital allocation clarity, and greater flexibility in a more competitive landscape, we believe the decision sets the stage for cable and/or media M&A in the coming years.

- Cable M&A implications:
  - We see a Comcast/Charter combination as likely over time and believe the current competitive environment could allow a deal to clear. However, capital structure remains a key consideration and full run-rate synergies could total $2-3b across opex and capex.
  - On timing, Charter must first close its acquisition of Cox, on which the CPUC is expected to vote August 13, then begin integration and further de-lever before entertaining a Comcast combination.

- NBCU more likely a seller than a buyer:
  - We see the spun NBCU entity as more likely a seller than a buyer, given potential tech-platform interest in its studio and parks assets; Netflix's terminated Warner Bros. bid cited deep film and TV libraries and beloved franchises, attributes that also describe NBCU and Universal Studios in particular.
  - While NBCU's broadcast networks and stations would trigger extensive FCC review, its sports heft, particularly the NFL and NBA, could prove attractive to streamers.

- Sum-of-the-parts valuation:
  - Our ~$30 sum-of-the-parts supports our $29 December 2026 price target, with C&P valued at 5.0x and C&E at 9.8x — based on Studios and Parks at 10.0x and Media at 7.0x 2027E EBITDA.

The chart(s) show J.P. Morgan's continuing coverage of the stocks; the current analysts may or may not have covered it over the entire period.
J.P. Morgan ratings or designations: OW = Overweight, N= Neutral, UW = Underweight, NR = Not Rated

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:
J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com.
